Hares: Gorgeous, Lucky Lek, Fungus, Not Cleaver

Today's run was a bit long which earned a Hash Shit but the the real judges -- the runners themselves -- came in with high-fives thanking the hares for the fantastic trails making up today's run, several of which were new to all. Several runners claimed today the best run of the year, and maybe of all time. Sometimes Hash Shit is worthwhile.

Getting to the laager put some drivers into several loops around the reservoir because the hares had made a critical HHH sign visible only after the turn. Not to be outdone the next HHH was hung in a bush under draping leaves sending people up a long dead-end road. The hares received lots of phone calls today speaking in not-so-polite terms.

Today's Steward was no less than dangerous Secret Agent Dick Gobbler who proceeded to put the circle on edge as he attempted to build a 3-level human pyramid. Knowing how legs can break doing this the yelling from the onlookers stopped the stunt at a wobbly 2 levels. Well done SADG, join the circus.

Our OnSite registrar Invisible Man is putting out a call for a new assistant with registration following Su Su Nonna's need to step down. Ideally this would be someone who comes most weeks and can help with names, taking money and learning to enter weekly details into the database. He'll train you, he's a nice guy.

With the circle starting late because the run having been over long, and darkness arriving early as it does this time of year GM Wilma dispatched his duties in quick order. A Virgin was icily welcomed, a Hasher from Chiang Mai welcomed, Announcements made and Hash Shit coaxed out of the circle enough times for Murkury to award Hash Shit to Gorgeous.

Another great hashing day!
