Hares: No Hope, Singha & Swollen Colon

Doodlebug Goes Missing

The circle was closed and most were gone. Our RA, Religious Advisor, Wilma handed Not Long Enough a cold beer saying “beer helps” as a first-time experience came to our GM. He had a missing 83-year-old hasher and now rapidly approaching darkness. NLE went to the hares but they said that once you leave the laager you're on your own adding that doing anything now would just put more people at risk as they sped away.

Shit happens but accidents really aren't. Little Focker always walks with Doodlebug and she always carries her phone. Today she stayed at the laager and he went alone, without a phone. Several walkers commented they'd seen him having difficulty on the first hill, but now the circle was closed and he was more than an hour overdue. Hopes were that Doodlebug would somehow find a way to a road, reach a phone and call LF, but no call came. With full darkness set in a good 30 minutes Doodlebug emerged from the darkness sweating profusely but with a great smile—Little Focker handed him a cold, cold beer. He'd seen the lights of the second circle. Our RA was right again, beer definitely helps, and we all had another!

Our hares gave us a thoroughly enjoyable run made even better from the light drizzle ending of a huge storm that lashed us all morning. Along the run we climbed and descended several several ridges on very runnable trails with a few steep connectors, some natural, others hacked out. The wet, leaf-covered trails dampened out nearly all sounds, apparently even the horn that NLE was blowing as he and Fungus stayed in front working out the checks. It's not often a septuagenarian gets to the front, much less stay there a significant amount of time earning Fungus several beers in the circle.

Returners Campari and Sort Circuit were welcomed back when Invisible Man charged in taking Campari's down-down away saying he hadn't paid his registration yet! GM then got JC in asking why he didn't come in with the returners, hadn't he been allowed to return to his house? Jaws came in for announcements explaining he'd visited Gorgeous in hospital and he was improving. This brought Swollen Colon in saying for all these years Gorgeous had been touting drinking ethanol as you'd live to 100 but here he was in hospital at 83. Nice, SC, very sensitive! We actually thought of you when we heard the 2 gunshots on the run today. Shot at again we guessed!

Jaws stepped in as steward, replacing Top Off who'd fucked off, saying I've a few jokes! The circle groaned as he fired off:

There once was a young man from St Luu who gave his dear sister a screw. He said with aplomb "you're better than mom". She said "that's what dad told me too".

There once was a rabbi named Keith, who circumcised men with his teeth. It was not for the leisure, or the sensual pleasure, but to get at the cheese underneath.

Great spot Jaws, Good run of course, circle closed. Welcome back Doodlebug!
