

SCRIBE REPORT RUN #1932

Hares: Murkury & Rampant Rabbit

phuket-hhh.com

This week's Laager site was back up north at Ban Pak Plee on Navy land. The approach to the site was pretty potholed and so we arrived shaken not stirred! We were under the shade of some tall palm trees beside a smoky firepit. It seemed a smaller turnout today and a lot of the 'known' faces were missing and strangely it was a lot quieter (also reflected in the run offences)!

The GM introduced the Hares and picked Wilma out to be the Horn as the Run Master was absent. The dog owners were told to keep their dogs on leads as there were lots of free-range chickens about and Wilma was warned not to blow the horn near the elephant farm! Rampart Rabbit said the runners should come back with muddy socks and if they didn't it meant they'd been short cutting!

The walk was a flat one and we were back within the hour. It was a pleasant walk and the paper was easy to follow. We wandered through the normal kind of scenery, past some veggie crops and walked back in along the pylons on a stony lane.

Back at the Circle, the Hares were thanked for their haring. Notice that Murkury has morphed into Scammer (he became the stand-in as Murkury had to go). And it was noted that the Horn was rather quiet on the way round.

No Lucky Lek to yell, "Announmen" but Fungus shared a problem from last week's site: Because some didn't follow instructions and parked on an area that was seeding, the landowners don't want the PH3 back. However, after a bit of negotiation (beer and money changed hands), everything's ok again. We're allowed back!

..and Gone Already had a birthday too.

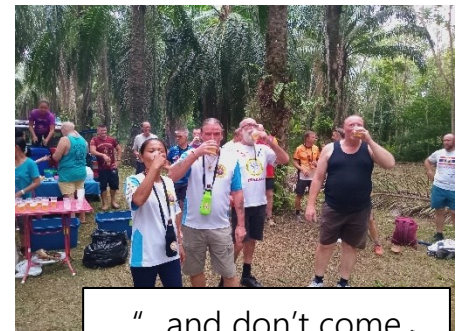

Welcome back to the fold...

"Why were they born so beautiful..?" 🎵

It took a long time to round up the visiting hashers this week... There was a bit of confusion about some gatecrashing youths who had turned up but hadn't registered!

"...and don't come back!" 🎵

Circle highlights/run offences:

Philthy Pisshead started the ball rolling today. He was confused why the Hares had told us there was a better way to get away from the Laager Site, on a road made of 'taa' (how Rampant Rabbit says tarmac). Here's to the great communicators!

Fungus and Any Time were passed (at great speed) by visiting hasher, Chinese Takeaway. She stopped to tie her laces up against a tree and then streaked past them again. Here's to speedy deliveries!

Up The Back accused Five Hundred Baht of pushing The Coroner into the muddy stream. Here is the 'evidence' for you to make up your own mind...

Swollen Colon was also overtaken by Chinese Takeaway but not just once... about 4 times. He wanted to know what she kept stopping to do in the bushes.

Tequila Slapper put down her camera and bravely led the Steward Spot. She began by telling the Hares that she got lost on the run! (Have you noticed that the other Hare has morphed now too? Thanks Wilma for stepping in as Rampant Rabbit.) Then she had some lovely long anecdotes about Accident's fear of ghosts, marriage stories about Wilma and Little Toe and a 'father/daughter' story (I think - there was a car alarm going off) about Bobagob and Chinese Takeaway. The grand finale involved some balloon popping action games.

Finally, the GM thanked everyone who was part of the 'nice shambles' (Steward Spot) and thanked the 'Invisible Hares'. Fungus summarised the day and seemed to encourage Hash Shit from the crowd. And so, in his absence, Rampant Rabbit got Hash Shit, even though it was a good run. It's all about attention to details...
