

SCRIBE REPORT RUN #1936

Saturday 18th November 2023

Hares: Substandard, Fungus,
Achmed The Saviour & Seaman Stains (VH)

This week's Laager site was at Ban Lipon Ridge, Northeast of Heroines Monument. We were in a sandy, rocky quarry, and yes, people did trip over the boulders as it got darker (nothing to do with drinking beer). We had a nice breeze and the gentle squeal of cicadas.

We had the usual call of "Circle Up" from the GM. Then the Hares gave us our instructions; whilst Fungus pointed the way for the runners, Substandard showed the walkers the route out. But before we all took off in our different directions, the Run Master quickly gave the Horn to Mask.

The walk was a good distance; it took us through 'pretty' jungle, along sandy trails and over a small squelchy bog. Initially the paper was well laid and fairly easy to follow. However, the further we went, the trickier it got. On the final stretch, most of us didn't come back in on paper; Ice humper and myself forged through 'virgin bush' under the guidance of Flying Dickhead. The run, so I am told, was good and Mask did a go job with the horn.

Lucky Lek was back today to yell, "Announmen":

- Sunday 19th November – Bike Hash Baan Pak Phli.
- Wednesday 22nd November – run on Phi Phi Island.

Virgins being 'deflowered'

Happy Birthday you ... know the rest

Circle highlights/run offences: (of which there were many, many today!)

All those who had tried to use GPS to get here today, plus the Hares, were called in by Jaws. The silly 'Google maps lady' took them the wrong way and they were late! His advice - never listen to GPS instructions! (Oh and never listen to Fungus either).

Philthy Pisshead called in Bobagob You Twat (his full moniker) and Still A Twat, to tell their GPS story. They parked close to the Laager (so they thought) but still had an hour to walk through the jungle to get here – Here's to Twat Nav!

Swollen Colon was very disappointed with Wilma. When they were all checking, Wilma waited until everyone was at the furthest point away from him to call 'On On'. Anyone would think it was a competition!

Fungus firstly congratulated Seaman Stains on being a Virgin Hare. But when she was laying paper, she got a big spider on her forehead. He told her to leave the spider there as a gift to the front runners – very generous!

The GM put Fungus and Substandard on the ice because they drove through the walkers blasting the motorbike horn. They were off out to lay more paper – bit late for that surely!

Jaws brought the Hares into the circle. He thought the walk was a disaster because he'd broken into an actual sweat! The walkers had been 'wandering around like headless chickens' looking for paper on a five-way split. I had to drop Sperm Bank in it too – he was also to blame for not checking properly!

A very noble effort from Polish My Crabs as Steward today – it was a tough crowd. He started by telling us that he was very pleased with himself; he had set off late and still got back in the top ten. After being in Thailand in for some time, he shared some interesting insights into the culture. He finished off with a couple of cheesy jokes.

The Run Master, Not Long Enough, stepped in for the 'final reckoning'. He thought it was a good run but the crowd had mixed opinions. However, as the walker's views don't really count apparently, it was deemed a "Good Run!"

Just before the GM finished proceedings, there was a last minute naming for Theo. There'll need to be a steward's enquiry on his Hash name though, as I didn't hear if it was Little Bleeder or Little Bladder...
