Hares: Mask

This week's Laager site was at Klong Krata reservoir - Near the Elephant Camp. Most know it as Chalong Dam and (spoiler alert...) a damn good walk it was too. We were situated on the disused gravelly road over to Patong, which was not quite as damn nice!

Lone Hare, Mask, told the runners it would be about 6.5km or perhaps a little more...The stats from Sweaty Bolloxs came back at 7.5km and an elevation of 633m (although SB came in very late indeed!) Horn, Top Off, gave us a quick honk while Butt Plug had a good yawn (look closely).

Mask sent us all of together but we quickly split up and went off in opposite directions. It was a steamy start but lovely walking alongside a stream. There were some saucy up slopes to tackle but we had a fine sprinkling of rain to cool us down. The final steep decent took us down the Patong hill full of treacherous ruts. According to The Blue Harlot and B.A., they found the terrain to be 'shiggy' (look it up in the dictionary). While Butt Plug thought the run was 'a bag of dicks' (that won't be in the dictionary).

games (and payback).

Fungus was Steward for the arvo. He thanked Mask and called up his fellow Tinmen. (Manneken Pis, modelling for Belgian fashion week). Fungus took the piss out of the unsuspecting and had some 'shite' dog stories. We heard that when MP was GM, he had a "French Ct of the week" slot. So Fungus reinstated it today and called up Train Spotter for some fun and (After this point, my recorder packed in, so apologies! Definitely time to get a new Hash Scribe. Only 1 more week of me churning out this drivel now. Or maybe I'll get sacked! Someone out there can do better, surely! Don't call me Shirley)

As per usual, there were lots of good run offences. Thanks to Philthy Piss Head, Wilma, Jaws, and B.A. amongst others for their choice contributions.

And as we drew to a close... it was time to decide... but you already knew... GOOD RUN!
