

SCRIBE REPORT RUN 1938

Saturday 3rd December 2023
Hares: Campari, La Lasagna
Nai Harn – Soi Naya

This week's Laager was at Soy Naya just north of Nai Harn lake. Basically it's a shit Laager site, too narrow, parking is very difficult and the circle area isn't a circle – more like an extended ellipse. Also you have to put up with though traffic and Hashers making a nuisance of themselves when they leave early. Other than that it's quite wonderful and provides a gateway to some really good Hashing territory.

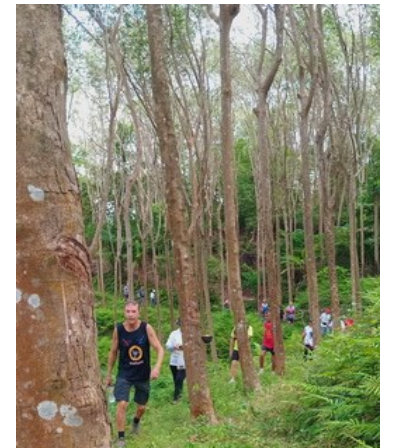

Hares were called in who explained that we would be running on 'Classic' multicolour and the walkers would be on 'standard' blue after an initial 1km or so on the multicolour. Mannekin Pis was named as Horn and was requested to look after it well as it had just got back from the 'menders'. Newcomers were also told that if they see pink they can be sure they are following the 'true' trail – more about that later.

I opted to go on the run after my abject failure to complete anything last week. I was also very interested to see if Campari's claim that the run would comprise 70% of virgin trails. Here you will see my recording of the trail that I followed which totalled about 4.5km and a total ascent of 255 metres. This includes about 300m between the green and red markers as I forgot to turn my watch on. It was in this section I saw my first faller Kill Her who I think turned back at this point. I think I put him off with my penetrating questions about whether he was walking or running. Next casualty we saw was Jiggly Jugs who was on her way back after crocking her ankle. Shame she decided to do it at the point furthest from the Laager site. At this juncture I was in back marker mode with Philthy Pisshead and a few others where we seemed to be checking all the falsies due to misleading laying of pink paper- one comes to expect more of an ex Run Master cum Horn. We got to a point on top of the hill where the trail went off to the right but we could see other others down below us going in the opposite direction. I thought this would be a good time to do a tactical shortcut and left PP and Co to their own devices. I did find the trail below me which I started to follow but did not see the people who should have been ahead of me. At this point the amount of paper being laid had increased so much and coupled with pink paper laid in a lasse fait manner it was becoming very difficult to see whether we were on the true trail or not. I was also beginning to see more and more runners due to all the apparent confusion and yet we still ended up checking out some massive falsies (see the map for confirmation). There were a couple more fallers, me included, but eventually we made it back in reasonable time before the circle commenced. Feedback from my boss Chief Scribe Takes It All In was that the walk was a 30 minute doddle but she did say she was 'power walking'. Other than all the above it was quite a good run but the virgin trail bit I must have misheard – more like 17% .

The Circle

Hares called in by GM for a beer and a thank you. GM told everybody to stay clear of the fallen overhead line – perhaps another black mark for the Laager site.

Lucky Lek was called in for Annoumen which he did.

Hash Committee Meeting at Shakers now moved to Monday 11th December. Joxy Moron confirmed next Tinmen Hash is on 6th December – see web site for details. Steward chaser Up The Back came in with a signing up list for stewards for the next few months.

One Birthday Boy this week - Hockey Banger from Canada.

Virgins called in for the usual ceremony – only one taker although three were registered. He got doused with ice water meant for three people.

Fungus spent quite a bit of time on the ice but not sure why but am sure he deserved it as ever.

Tootsie led the run offences and brought in Campari, La Lasagna, Who The Fuck is Alice, Manekin Pis, and Fungus to make the point how similar the trails were to previous Saturday Hashes, Tinmen etc and that whilst the first half was good Campari seemed to have lost the plot in the second half with so many falsies exacerbated by poor pink paper laying by MP.

Fucking French (Banana) and other French Speakers put on the ice for being noisy and not respecting he circle.

There was also a Scottish theme led by Jiggly Jugs including one wearing a kilt who turned out to be German – he was put on the ice and he proved he was a true Scot when he sat down much to the delight of the lady Hashers present.

Manekin Pis and Fungus called in to explain how the Horn had come to be damaged yet again.

Lucky Lek was this week's Steward – first in were the Hares who were reminded that there were at least 15 rules that must be followed to be a successful hare. Not sure whether he confirmed that they had met the required standard. The Coroner and Accident were called in for a beer mainly to stop their complaining that it's only the White men who normally get a free beer. LL explained he was a philosopher and not very good at joke telling – he then proceeded to tell two jokes but kept getting interrupted - first by the Noisy French and then the very late arrival back from the walk/run of Fussy Pussy and Gone Already to much cheers and adulation plus a big round of applause for sponsoring last week's run T- shirts.

I did try to catch the punch line of each of LL's jokes but have to admit to I could not meet Fungus's challenge. Barbie Doll did a rendition of a 'Its All Work for the Working Man To Do' and was then followed by a mini Steward spot by Fungus.

Philthy Phil did the final run offence about ankle breaking runs.

Returners and Leavers came in for a drink.

Not Long Enough led the proceedings for the Hashit and against all odds it was declared a Good Run! No Hashit was awarded.

GM announced the Circle was closed mainly due to 'rain stopped play'.

On On!
