The Pre-Run

Laager site was slightly difficult to find due to no signs, lack of GPS co-ordinates etc. However most knew where it was – we have hashed there a few times before!! More about all of this later.

The Run and Hares

Hares this week were the Geriatric Four JC, Bluey, Dr. Fucking Jekyll and Murkury. Nobody knows their collective age but if you had a Baht for each year they have existed you could have had quite a slap up meal at Shakers (other Hash related eateries are also available). Bjorn To Run received the dubious honour of being the Hash Horn for this week. JC explained the run was fairly flat and would be on multi-colour all the way with a couple of cut outs on blue paper for those who want to conserve their energy. He also said it was quite flat which received lots of cries of 'bullshit, bullshit'. I however had it on good authority from a very reliable source who shall remain nameless who did say it was pretty flat, out in the open and about 8k plus.

Anyway off we set and as indicated we were definitely on a flat run, out in the open, sandy/gritty underfoot and the sun for once was shining down on us. This made for quite warm running but there also appeared to be quite a few checks which allowed for some bunching up of the pack. We eventually broke out onto road and continued along that for some considerable time before reaching another checkpoint which really had brought everybody together. There were multiple options for which way the true trail could go but it was certainly quite lethargic checking going on especially from the FRB's but perhaps no surprise there. The On On was eventually called which required us to double back along the incoming trail. Again we continued on relatively flat running, not so smooth underfoot and still out in the blazing sun. Eventually we reached some plantation areas for a bit of shady respite and meandered around as people tried to find the paper – this allowed for short cutting by some until we reached a more defined track and also had a fight with some dogs. We could see the usual hills in the distance which were getting ever closer so I thought I knew what would be coming next and perhaps the advance advice given would prove to be bullshit as expected. We then dived into some jungle and came across some walkers who were struggling to get down a slippery slope. This was met with lots of moans from various 'runners' and the walkers kindly let us pass. We descended into a babbling brook which we followed for a little while and got our feet nicely wet. Then it was up another slippery slope with carefully crafted steps which brought us onto a narrow path through some vegetation which I carefully followed behind various walkers and eventually came out to an open space with various runners (or so I thought) and a range of walkers stretching out into the distance. I thought I ought to get myself into running mode lest it be thought I was one of the walkers although I did have a big stick with me. It turned out that it was not that far back to the Laager site and to my surprise there were no runners to be seen when we got there. After a brief discussion with the Hares it turned out I had turned left onto the walker's in-trail and should have turned right. However I was still in over the hour so I thought that would be good enough for me and based on my trusty analogue watch reckoned I had covered around 6km of the allotted 8km which was even better.

The Circle

GM started the circle by calling in the Hares and the Hash horn for a drink and thanked them for their efforts. However before that he called in his new found lap dog Piss Drinker who eagerly sat on the ice before he was even asked.

Jaws was not immediately available to come in as Lucky Lek stand-in to do Annoumen so his was ably performed by Ice Arse. Only announcement was this month's Pooying Picnic Hash – details on the web site.

Jaws called in to list the Virgins of which about six appeared out of a possible ten. A quite orderly baptism this week.

Visiting Hashers – One visitor from Phomh Penh Hash - Sir Fancy Pants two weeks in a row. Never Hard from Perth Too Small To See from Hanoi.

Hash Naming - No new names but a report correction that Just Fuck Off is actually Just Puck Off

Hash Shirts

- Scammer – 50 runs
- Crack A Boner – 100 runs
- Bjorn Too Run – 100 runs
- Butt Plug – 500 runs
- Wilma - 777 runs

Steward Spot - Bobagob was the Steward this week and made a very commendable effort to resurrect some fine Hash singing. To help those with poor memory and low attention span sheet music (lyrics) were handed out so everybody could join in. The English enjoyed 'Swing Low Sweet Chariot' but the obvious favourite was 'Roll back, roll back, oh roll back my foreskin for me, for me! since it featured many times in the remainder of the Circle. Well done Bobagob.

Run Offences etc

Run offences seemed to centre around mis-direction to the Laager site due to lack of signs and lack of late 20th century GPS technology – no not 21st century – it is that old. Probably due to the fact our Hares were mostly born in the '19th Century and I do mean that. People born between 1800 and 1899.

One result was the Hash Master MP going to Mosquito Lake apparently. In the same vein a few people got lost on the Hash even though for 95% of people the trail was obviously well marked. Probably came from the stress of finding the Laager site in the first place. Promoters were Murkury, Jungle Balls, Wilma, The GM, Invisible Man, Sir Fancy Pants, Seaman Stains Piss Drinker, Fungus Offensive ones were Train Spotter, JC, Fungus, Manekin Pis, Jaws, Jessica, On Her Back, Masarap, Key Hole to name just a few.

Hashit - Joxy Moron led proceedings for the Hashit. Apart from directions to the Laager site all else was considered good according to Joxy and the assembled throng agreed. A Good Run was offered by Joxy and everybody shouted back 'Good Run, Good Run'. Tootsie remains the Hashit Holder. Let's see if the Geriatric Four can repeat the same next week – yes it's them again!!

GM declared the circle closed.

On On!
